

“Was overwhelmed with the complexity of Project Management. It was broken down into easy to understand concepts. It will be very beneficial for me going forward, wish I had known about it years ago.”

- Gregg L. Haas, Foley Equipment Co.

“This class was probably the most challenging class I have taken within the Project Management Certification program. She tailored the class to our experience with Agile Projects and pushed all of us to think outside the box. You could see the progress that was made throughout the class by each individual person.”

- Jenna Ginest, USD 259

Master Certificate in PROJECT MANAGEMENT

The skill to successfully lead and manage projects – large or small – is essential in the corporate business world. It's critical that you have the best tools and techniques at your disposal. The Project Management Institute® (PMI) model and foundation are globally recognized as the gold standard.

Training can make or break the success of organizational projects. The 2018 PMI Pulse of the Profession survey drew the correlation between organizations which employed trained project managers and successful project completion. Certified project managers could demonstrate that greater than 80% of their projects were completed on time, on budget and met the business intent.

Additionally, as an individual, becoming a certified Project Management Professional (PMP®) can increase your earning potential — 20% higher on average — than those without a PMP certification. (Earning Power: Project Management Salary Survey 10th Edition®, PMI 2017.) CMD's training can be used to fulfill the required 35 hours of project management education.

Whether you plan to pursue the PMP or not, The Center for Management Development's (CMD) Master Certificate in Project Management develops your knowledge and ability to successfully use the processes and tools as outlined in the PMI's PMBOK® Guide.
